

Theatre Fest

"All the world's a stage" as rightfully claimed by Shakespeare, we make an ardent attempt to appreciate the inclusiveness of the STAGE by invoking its capacity to accommodate myriad theatrical perspectives of and thereby let the audience identify with multiple personas that they adorn in life.

We invite you to witness our students transform themselves into dramatis personae of the universal stage at our theatre fest.

Two Day National Seminar

THE NONSENSE SPECTRUM: LIGHT, DARK AND THE GREY OF HUMOUR CREATION

19th and 20th August 2019

About the Seminar

Humor is one of the extreme edges of creativity.

David Lunbar

When the entire world becomes too serious and our brains are hammered flat by conflicts of right and wrong, a bit of humor talk might bring the healing touch. Creating a humorous piece of literature, art work or film can be as challenging as creating a serious work - in fact, more so. A humorous work can be as complex and as magnificent as an intricate note of music. Humor can heal, ease and stir minds.

Literature, or any other creative genre, cannot be without humor, for an imaginative mind cannot help perceive the lighter side of the world. Literature has always showcased the various aspects of humor in diverse ways. Humor ranges from a friendly banter between friends to satiric and/or lighter depiction of complex social concerns. In fact, no other stream of creative writing can best and safely represent the socio political demagoguery that is in vogue across the globe today.

Imagination has a way of presenting the harsh, uncanny and uneasy through mild, lucid and easy channels. It also has a way of infusing disturbance and concern through wit and hilarity. The departments of English and Functional English, Little Flower College, Guruvayoor, are opening up a platform to explore and research the multifarious aspects of the imaginary possibilities and proficiency of humor as a medium of expression.

All faculty, students and researchers are welcome to join us in our venture perceiving the serious in the silly.
